

2. JONATHAN MONOLOGUE | Act 1, Scene 2, p 7-8

Finally, hesitating, [JONATHAN] decides to knock on the great doors. This makes him feel rather stupid. Nobody answers. He knocks again. Nobody answers. This makes him feel even more stupid. He clears his throat.

JONATHAN H– hello? Hello?

It's Jonathan Harker.

I said, it's Jonathan Harker!!!! –Esquire?!!!

I've come here– all the way from London!

To– godforsaken– middle of nowhere, bloody Eastern Europe– and I've been traveling for– forever– ship to train to coach to– to– to (the biggest outrage of all) FOOT–

Because the peasants– suppose that's not the word, anymore– local chaps– my porters, who were quite expensive, by the way– ABANDONED me a mile down the road! And I have these– legal papers– and they are heavy, and it's HOT out, and I am obviously here on a fools' errand and will probably DIE abandoned in-in Romania, or wherever it is– eaten by birds

HELLO?!! IS ANYBODY HOME? HELLO?!!!!
